WILCOMB H. BENFIELD, Treasurer.

GENERAL REMARKS.

Our schools the past year have been conducted with as much success — “with a few exceptions” — as could be expected.

By visiting the schools without notice, we have been better able to see them in their normal conditions; and good teachers are always willing to have their schools seen at any time.

Of teachers and pupils and the work of instruction we can generally report favorably, and in most of the schools we would commend them very highly.

Teachers labor at a great disadvantage who have to encounter the adverse influences of the parents of the pupils at home; a great deal of the bitter and angry feeling, much irregularity of attendance, dissatisfaction and complaint would be prevented if the work in the school room could be better understood at home.

If you take an interest in your children's education, do not criticise the teacher too severely; but go into the schools and, by some kind word, act or deed, encourage the teacher, and perhaps the school may be made better by what you have done or said.

No school can reach the mark of perfection until it has the co-operation of parents, teachers and pupils; the children should hear the teacher criticised less, see more kindly interest manifested outside the school room, and be taught to respect the teacher and the rules of the school.

Send your children to school the first day and have them attend regularly; we notice by the registers that there was quite a falling off in attendance in some of the schools during the latter part of the second term.

When we take into consideration that more than ninety-five per cent. of our children attend no institution of learning other than the town schools, we cannot fail to see the importance not only of having good schools but of the scholars attending them regularly, for in no other way can they obtain the best results.

On account of the teacher having an engagement elsewhere, the second term in School No. 2 was not as long by two weeks as the others ; this will undoubtedly be made up the coming year, as this school is large, and should have its full share of schooling.

Respectfully submitted,
